Religious liberty, of course, implies civil liberty. In fact, the true idea of government is to secure to man the rights of conscience. All his other rights are subordinate, or implied in the rights of conscience, properly understood. Our Pilgrim Fathers were driven from their native land and the graves of their ancestors by the hand of tyranny and oppression, and forced to seek a home in America, where they might enjoy Freedom to worship God. This was their grand idea, and the grand object of their mission to the shores of America; and the design of the Government which they formed, was mainly to protect them in the enjoyment of this liberty. They regarded the Lord Jesus Christ as their King, and themselves as the rightful subjects of his mediatorial kingdom. According to a certain writer on this subject, they undertook nothing which they did not ask him to prosper, and they accomplished nothing for which they did not give him the praise: they suffered nothing without carrying their sorrows to his throne, and they ate nothing which they did not ask him to bless. And when the time came, in the providence of God, for their separation from their mother country, these same immortal principles of liberty were embodied in their Declaration of Independence. Yes, the great experiment of self-government, according to the word of God, was to be made in America; and having formed our noble Constitution, the eyes of...
